

Different Immigration Programs Under Express Entry

Canada's Express Entry system is a popular and efficient pathway for skilled workers seeking permanent residency. Launched in 2015, it streamlines the application process for three main economic immigration programs, allowing Canada to attract and retain talented individuals who can contribute to the country's economy.

What is Express Entry?

Express Entry is an online system used by the Canadian government to manage applications for permanent residency from skilled workers. It ranks candidates based on factors such as age, education, work experience, and language proficiency. Those with the highest scores are invited to apply for permanent residency through periodic draws.

- Federal Skilled Worker Program (FSWP): This program is designed for skilled workers with foreign work experience who want to immigrate to Canada permanently. Eligibility is based on factors like skilled work experience, language ability, and education. Applicants must score at least 67 points out of 100 on the FSWP selection grid to qualify.
- Federal Skilled Trades Program (FSTP): The FSTP targets skilled trades workers who want to become permanent residents. To be eligible, applicants must have a valid job offer from a Canadian employer or a certificate of qualification in their skilled trade issued by a Canadian provincial, territorial, or federal authority. They must also meet language proficiency requirements and have at least two years of full-time work experience in a skilled trade.

· Canadian Experience Class (CEC): This program is for individuals who have gained skilled work experience in Canada on a temporary work permit. Applicants must have at least one year of skilled work experience in Canada, meet the required language levels, and plan to live outside the province of Quebec. The CEC is popular among international students and temporary foreign workers who have integrated into Canadian society and the labor market.
