What is Trump's Dumps?

Trump's Dumps – also known as TDStore – is a card shop that is specialized in credit card dumps only. There is no option to buy single cards or any other digital products. But the dumps database is rather large, frequently updated, and comes with extended search filters. You can find the onion link for Trump's Dumps to the right of this article.

As with many carding shops, you need to register an account before you can access the market. But that is a one-step process and the only information you need to provide is your chosen username, a password, and a jabber account. Entering a jabber account is required but not needed to access your account. So if you have no jabber account or don't want to provide one, just use some dummy email address there. But note that if you lose the password to your account and have stated no valid jabber, you will not be able to recover your account, so you should provide a jabber account if you want to be able to reset your password at a later point.

Once your account is created, you can immediately access the dumps database. There is no required deposit to access any data. For any deposits, the only accepted currency is bitcoin so you should make sure to transfer enough so the transaction fees are acceptable.

In the dumps section, you are able to filter for specific BINs, ZIPs, and bases as well as the typical search options for country, card level, card type, et cetera. Bulk sales are not being offered by Trump's Dumps. Also note that refunds are not possible for Citibank, USAA Savings Bank, and Regions Bank. Otherwise, the default refund time is three hours if you purchase less than 20 dumps
