Understanding Hernia and Its Types

A hernia occurs when an organ or tissue pushes through a weak spot in the surrounding muscle or connective tissue. It can develop due to factors like excessive strain, aging, or congenital conditions. Common types of hernias include:

- Inguinal Hernia – Occurs in the groin area and is more common in men.
- Umbilical Hernia – Develops near the navel and is often seen in infants and adults.
- Incisional Hernia – Forms at the site of a previous surgery.
- Hiatal Hernia – Affects the upper stomach region when part of the stomach protrudes into the chest cavity.
- Femoral Hernia – Found in the upper thigh and is more common in women.

Seeking consultation with a hernia surgeon in Borivali at the earliest signs can help prevent further complications such as strangulation, infection, or bowel obstruction.

Symptoms That Require Immediate Attention

Hernias may not always cause pain initially, but certain symptoms indicate the need for medical evaluation:

- Visible bulge in the affected area
- Pain or discomfort, especially during physical activities
- A burning or aching sensation at the hernia site
- Nausea, vomiting, or digestive issues in case of hiatal hernias
- Increased swelling and tenderness
