this book, background information on climate change and why adaptation is needed in developing countries is provided in chapter II. The chapter also explains how the UNFCCC, which provides the basis for international action on climate change, is helping adaptation efforts in developing countries. human-induced climate change arising from increasing carbon dioxide and other heat-trapping gasses in the atmosphere. The climate is changing, and human activities are now part of the cause. But how does a climate change manifest itself in day-to-day weather? This book approaches the topic by explaining distinctions between weather. Inaction on climate change would result in far reaching and devastating health consequences, particularly for the poor; on the other hand, a strong and equitably distributed cap on greenhouse gas emissions (GHG) would bring major and lasting global health improvements and reduce the global disease burden by more than 25%.
