How Much Does Roof Pressure Washing Cost in Jacksonville?

The cost of roof pressure washing typically falls between $250 and $800 for residential properties. Here's a rough breakdown:

- Small homes (1,000 – 1,500 sq. ft.): $250 - $400
- Medium-sized homes (1,500 – 2,500 sq. ft.): $400 - $600
- Large homes (2,500+ sq. ft.): $600 - $800+

For commercial and industrial buildings, prices generally range from $0.15 to $0.30 per square foot, depending on the building's size and complexity.

What Affects the Cost of Roof Cleaning?

1. Roof Size & Material

Larger roofs require more time, cleaning solutions, and water, which increases the overall cost. The type of roofing material—shingles, tile, or metal—also plays a role since different materials need different cleaning methods.

2. Dirt, Algae & Mold Buildup

A lightly soiled roof will cost less to clean than one covered in thick layers of mold and algae. More buildup means additional treatments, which can raise the price.

3. Roof Slope & Accessibility

Steep roofs or those with complex structures require special equipment and safety measures, increasing labor costs.

4. Cleaning Method Used

- Soft washing (best for shingles) uses low pressure and eco-friendly chemicals, costing slightly more but preventing roof damage.
- High-pressure washing is used for metal and concrete tile roofs, but improper technique can cause damage.

5. Additional Services (Optional but Worth Considering)

- Gutter cleaning: $50 - $200 extra
- Moss/algae treatment: $100 - $300 extra
- Protective sealant application: Price varies by material

DIY vs. Professional Roof Washing: Which is Better?

Trying to clean your own roof might seem like a money-saving move, but it comes with risks:

- Safety hazards: Without proper equipment, climbing onto your roof can be dangerous.
- Potential damage: Using the wrong pressure setting or chemicals can destroy shingles and void warranties.
- Time-consuming: Professionals can complete the job faster and more effectively.
