

The Truth About Vaccines

It's heart-wrenching when I hear this statistic...

"This is the first generation of kids that are not expected to outlive their parents."

Despite all our medical advancements... despite all the money and all the research and all the science, chronic illness and disease are rising every year.

Asthma, childhood diabetes, food allergies, digestive disorders, developmental delays, ADHD, autism, eczema, epilepsy, Alzheimers, brain damage, etc... all of these rates are rising.

Simultaneously, the government-required vaccine schedule for children has increased from 5 doses in 1960 to 24 doses in 1983 to 69 doses in 2016.

The US now gives three times more childhood vaccines than most developed countries, yet we have some of the highest rates of childhood issues NOT seen in other countries.

And so we have questions.

Are vaccines to blame? What are the risks we're not being told about? Where are the safety studies on the combined doses of all these vaccines? What are our alternatives to stay healthy and prevent disease?

The Truth About Vaccines is a documentary series that delivers the facts needed to understand this heated debate.

I've been talking about this series a lot lately, and it's airing right now.

Over 60 health experts, researchers, and activists have contributed to make this the largest documentary of its kind ever released on the topic of vaccines.

If you've missed it so far, you owe it to yourself (especially if you have a young family!) to watch this.
