

Maxi Dresses and How to Choose Them

My favourite thing to wear is dresses, especially maxi dresses. They are floor length and I rarely have to worry about “sitting pretty”. They are effortless-an entire outfit all by itself, and oh so CHIC! Here are a few tips to help you choose a dress to suit your body type.

Full Figure:

To avoid looking as if you’re wearing a nightgown, choose a dress that hits at your natural waist, and has definite shape. Don’t be afraid to belt your maxi dress.

Short Frames:

Choose the dress that best suit your frame, and have it hemmed to your proper height. Most dry cleaners have a seamstress or tailor who can easily do this for you, if you are unable to do it yourself.

Tall & Slender:

Make sure that you choose a dress that has a definite waist. Otherwise, you can appear more willowy and too thin. Don’t be afraid to belt your dress.

Prints:

Head to toe prints have the potential for looking too busy. Keep it balanced it up by keeping your accessories, like a handbag, belt, or shoes- a solid colour. On the reverse, if your maxi dress is solid in colour, add printed accessories to keep it interesting.

Athletic Frame:

Tube like, column style, thin strapped dresses allow you to show off your toned arms and mask a boyish shape. A form fitting dress just may be perfect for you, making you appear tall and elegant. A slit works well, but make sure that it isn’t too high.

Busty Ladies:

Look for a V-neck maxi dress, to avoid looking top heavy. You want there to be a separation between your breast, and not appear as if they’ve merged together. If the v neck is too low, consider sewing in fabric panel, or wearing a camisole underneath.

This season is all about rocking your own inimitable style in a stunning maxi dress, which is why this versatile style be your go-to choice for any occasion. Channel your inner boho princess with a floaty chiffon design embellished with delicate flowers. Or shimmer in head-to-toe sequins with a long sleeve number hugging your every curve. How you style your maxi dress is up to you, be creative with your accessories and your personality will shine through.

Elegant Evening Style

If you've got a black tie event on your calendar, then it's the perfect excuse to go for all-out glamour as only an evening maxi dress will do.
