How Do We Help Employees?

Every employee has the right to safely attend to their work each day without fearing injuries or death. However, at some workplaces such as construction sites and factories, we often notice a clear violation of OSHA standards. To fight such negligence, OSHA gives employees some rights such as they can request their local OSHA authority to send an agent for inspection of their workplace. Employees can deny performing duties that involve high risks. They can file complaints against their employer or contractor without fearing discrimination.
