Homeless Services Comparison

Ready to Work is a program developed by Isabel McDevitt, CEO of Bridgehouse in Boulder. Here I'll be comparing this newcomer to the landscape of the seemingly never-ending fight against homelessness to the old-guard in Denver.

Denver's Homeless Services

1. Step 13 (Step Denver), vs Ready to Work, Boulder
2. TRT (Cherokee House), Denver vs Ready to Work, Boulder
3. Salvation Army (CrossRoads), Denver vs Ready to Work, Boulder
4. Denver Rescue Mission, Denver five-points vs Ready to Work, Boulder

Denver's Homeless Referral Services

- Colorado Coalition for the Homeless, Denver vs Bridgehouse, Boulder
- Veterans Administration, Aurora vs Bridgehouse, Boulder

- Volunteers of America, Denver vs Bridgehouse, Boulder

The Volunteers of America and the Veterans Administration share a facility in Denver where they process referrals from, Bill Daniels Center on Santa Fe. Until recently, the Veterans Administration processed referrals out of 3030 Downing in Denver, an outpost next to Bo-Matthews, which has since been closed and those referral services are currently processed out of the Bill Daniels Center.

Emergency Services for the Homeless

(past/present/in-flux) Since emergency services are generally tied to the severity of the seasons we'll explore the services overall, because many of these services may not kick-in unless needed.

- Denver Emergency Services for the Homeless vs Boulder Emergency Services for the Homeless, excluding hospitals. paramedics, police, firefighters.

"Bryce" a Ready to Work Boulder resident

If you don't know what "Ready to Work" is speak with Isabel McDevitt who is currently the CEO of Bridge House in Boulder. Those confused about the "Ready to Work" program just wait until you speak with Isabel because she's always happy to explain what the "Ready to Work" program is and why she believes anyone can change their lives while as a resident of any "Ready to Work" program for the homeless.

Playground for the Creative In 2017 a Ready to Work Boulder resident named Bryce volunteer to work at the downtown Boulder library in the Bldg. 61 Makerspace with Master Woodworker Janet and Robbie. Janet and Robbie were kicking the Boulder Tree Opps program into gear for its second year.

Ready to Work Boulder

This long-term project is meant to make use of the dead Ash Tree wood that the Emerald Ash Borer destroys. Every other state that has been invaded by this non-native and an invasive bug has simply thrown away the wood. By putting this hand-selected Ash Tree wood into the hands of Janet and Robbie, the wood becomes a timeless piece of woodworking.

They're building furniture from these hand-selected pieces of Ash Wood in the Boulder Library's Building 61 Makerspace. Next to Bryce is the 3D printing machine that is available to anyone in the community to use free-of-charge minus the cost of materials. That the machine was used to create a very detailed sculpture, in fact so detailed that it looks like a toy you would buy off the shelf in a store.
